Suggestions and Way forward

- The continuation of this project has been approved for another 2 years.
- The project could enhance the employability of rehabilitees through acquiring accreditations in vocational training courses as well as recognized certificates through safety training courses. Their work motivation could be strengthened through career counselling. Besides, individual career guidance and job matching could help the rehabilitees to secure a stable job when returning to the community.
- Some jobs require skills with accreditation from relevant authorities, such as the Construction Industry Council and a valid Construction Industry Safety Card. If the rehabilitees acquire relevant skills and certificates during their stay in SKC, they could secure a job once they return to the community. Therefore, it is suggested that SKC could apply to relevant authorities for recognition to run the Mandatory Basic Safety Training (Construction Work) Course.
